

HOT SPOTS FOR HEALTH

As the demand for telehealth services remains strong, the Missouri Telehealth Network is helping to ensure the state's Federally Qualified Health Centers (FQHCs) and Community Mental Health Centers (CMHCs) have the ability to provide virtual care to their patients. The Missouri Telehealth Network is using grant money to provide Wi-Fi hot spots to FQHCs and CMHCs for use by their patients and staff.

The hot spots, which are mobile Wi-Fi devices that use cellular data to give users access to the Internet, can be used by patients for telehealth visits or by clinic staff who travel to patient homes or deliver care through mobile health vehicles. The cost of the hot spots and data usage is funded by the program, so there is no cost to health care organizations or patients.
